Call Analyzer v 1.13 : Software - Update pc, bentley microstation powerdraft, gps, microstation, software, software, software.Q: Is there some rule on HVAC that won't allow me to have two different sized air vents on the same side of my house? We just bought a house with a new HVAC system (shark) that is down the center of the house. We would like to rewire and re-add air vents so the older one can be upgraded to a larger size. Shark has told us that they will not allow air vents to be removed if they are only a few inches taller than the original, and would have to put an additional duct in the new location if the new air vents we want are taller than the existing ones. Does this seem reasonable, or are they trying to make more money off of me? A: Not really. It's about design standards. Usually, the larger the box, the bigger the line. Your HVAC contractor would not want to mess with the design. A: If you want to switch the direction of airflow on a single HVAC unit, you're going to have to switch the direction of air flow and might have to add in a return. The ductwork is designed to handle the flow rate and air flow direction, and will pull air from one spot to another and keep the air moving without a return. If you have a return, your HVAC might not be able to deliver enough air flow to get everyone comfortable. To add more vents, you could switch from one of the existing ducts into a new duct, which is smaller than the old duct. That's more difficult because the existing duct is probably in a cramped location, so you'd have to cut into the floor and cut a new duct to accommodate the new airflow pattern. You'll have to move the ducts at a minimum, which is quite a hassle. You'd be better off to just install a new HVAC unit in the new location. $$\left\langle h_{n} \left| \hat{T}_{\mathrm{e-p}} \right| h_{m} \right\rangle = \frac{1}{r} \sum_{i,j} g_{n_{i},p_{j}}^{\{(ij)\}} h_{n_{j}}^{\{(ij)\}} \left\langle \Psi \left| \hat{T}_{\mathrm{e-p}} \right| \Psi \right\rangle$$
 with the nuclear wave functions $g_{n_{i},p_{j}}^{\{(ij)\}}$ and the electron-polarizability interaction matrix elements $g_{n_{i},p_{j}}^{\{(ij)\}}$. Using the ground state eigenvectors h_{i} , Eq. (1) simplifies to $T_{1} = \frac{1}{r} \left\langle \Psi \left| \hat{T}_{\mathrm{e-p}} \right| \Psi \right\rangle$ with the nuclear state vector $|\Psi\rangle = \sum_{i=1}^{N} h_{i} |i\rangle$ and the electron-polarizability matrix element $\langle \mathbf{r}_{i} | \hat{T}_{\mathrm{e-p}} | \mathbf{r}_{j} \rangle = \sum_{p} g_{n_{i},p}^{\{(ij)\}} g_{n_{j},p}^{\{(ij)*}}$. For high-field, $\langle \mathbf{r}_{i} | \hat{T}_{\mathrm{e-p}} | \mathbf{r}_{j} \rangle$ can be approximated by the diagonal elements of \hat{T}
