“The Demon's Covenant” The legendary soundtrack to the critically acclaimed Half-Life 2. Features music from artists such as Jesper Kyd, Underworld, Nine Inch Nails, Scarlet Follies, Darude and many more. Available for both PC and Mac.

Mimosa is a smallish packer-runner-triple-cab light-duty pick-up/grunt. At the same time, it looks like an appropriate tool for light construction work, with 4” steel pontoons and a one-piece steel framed floor. Constructed in a 3-piece body (chassis, cab, trailer), it has been produced in four cab lengths: 9’ – this is available as a panel-van, with no trailer hitch. It has 1” T-style steel tubes in the corners, and 2” pontoons. 14’ – panel-van with 2” pontoons. 17’ – conventional style van with 3” pontoons. 22’ – floorless four door van with 2” pontoons. It’s available with single cab, double cab or quad cab (one rear row of seats for a 6-seater) with 10-14” or 12-16” height rear doors. It’s not currently available with a double cab 6-seater. The drivers’ side door is a full-width (7.25’) slider, which can be opened by a remote-control. The windows are all electrically operated and closed using a power window/sliding sunroof arrangement. The weight range is 500 – 1100 lbs. It has a live load capacity of 653-785 lbs. The chassis width and beam are roughly 13’4” and 6’6” respectively. In general, the lighter (single cab) vehicles are more expensive and have a shorter drivetrain (0 to 60 in 13 seconds). The four door model is quite well-priced, with a single cab model starting at just $24,399. The conventional 17’ model (that has a bit more interior headroom than the less expensive panel vans) is priced between $26,899 and $29,299. The 14’ and 17’ models are the most well-balanced, with the heaviest models being the quad models at 1050 lbs. All models with ponto

Over the past century or so, human society has witnessed the rise and fall of numerous civilizations without a seat at the international table. But might it not be possible to create an independent civilization, and gain our freedom from a corrupt International System? If you have ever visited the moon, Mars or some other part of the solar system you know what I am talking about. But could we create a better society than our own, with all the natural resources we need, in a different star system orbiting some other galaxy? Space colonies, many not using any nuclear energy, are an easy way to achieve this. Unlike outer space, this is real. You could go there today if you cared to. And it is coming, thanks to the governments and new space pioneers of the 21st century. Space colonies are very common in science fiction. But unfortunately often they are just a futuristic dream. So how to create space colonies without violating the ethics that govern Earth? Many professional space planners say they will be possible, but few actually have been successfully created. The most successful one is the novel called 'Countdown From Last Earth' by Robert Zubrin. This far-fetched story presents us with quite a compelling scenario. As soon as everyone realizes it is time to go to the stars, they leave. But they take an entire civilization along with them.

Packed onto a few dozen large 'mother' ships. They send out radio messages to Earth, saying 'we are leaving'. But no-one pays attention. A civilization so successful in other respects that they have forgotten their centuries of Earth history? They build incredible ships, the size of the largest military ships of the time. With limitless fuel. And with advanced technology, they immediately go into orbit above the Earth. On the next day they are fired up once again. The very same happened on the moon only millions of years ago. The range of distances travelled by these spaceships will be enormous. They will reach the closest stars in a few years. The next stars in a human lifetime. And in a few million years to the nearest galaxy. A major obstacle becomes evident: The fuel necessary to travel great distances. And when the atoms of nuclear fuel start to decay (tellurium, plutonium) to slower atoms (lithium) nuclear energy will become less and less efficient. Because it cannot start from lithium atoms, which no longer enter the reaction chain, but rather have to start from atoms that themselves were formed
